

Musicians That Time Has Mercifully Forgotten, Part One: The Ones We'd Rather Not Remember

The music industry is a fickle one. One day, you're the hottest new thing, and the next, you're yesterday's news. For every Beatles or Rolling Stones, there are countless other bands and artists who have faded into obscurity. Some of these forgotten musicians were simply not very good. Others had their careers derailed by bad luck, personal problems, or changing musical tastes. And still others were simply victims of their own hubris.

In this series of articles, we'll take a look back at some of the most forgettable musicians of all time. These are the ones we'd rather not remember, the ones who made us cringe when we heard their songs on the radio, and the ones who we're glad to have forgotten about.

So sit back, relax, and enjoy this trip down memory lane. We promise not to play any Milli Vanilli.

1. The Archies

The Archies were a fictional band created for the animated TV show of the same name. The show was about a group of teenagers who formed a band and became overnight sensations. The Archies' songs were catchy and fun, but they were also incredibly cheesy. The band's biggest hit, "Sugar, Sugar," was a number-one hit in the United States in 1969. However, the Archies' success was short-lived. The show was canceled after two seasons, and the band faded into obscurity.

2. The Bay City Rollers

The Bay City Rollers were a Scottish pop band that was popular in the early 1970s. The band was known for its tartan outfits and its catchy pop songs. The Bay City Rollers' biggest hit, "Saturday Night," was a number-one hit in the United Kingdom in 1975. However, the band's success was short-lived. The Bay City Rollers broke up in 1978, and the members went their separate ways.

3. The Partridge Family

The Partridge Family was a fictional band created for the TV show of the same name. The show was about a family of musicians who traveled around the country in a bus. The Partridge Family's songs were catchy and wholesome, and the show was a huge hit with families. The Partridge Family's biggest hit, "I Think I Love You," was a number-one hit in the United States in 1970. However, the show's success was short-lived. The Partridge Family broke up in 1974, and the members went their separate ways.

4. The Monkees

The Monkees were a manufactured pop band created for the TV show of the same name. The show was about a group of four young men who were trying to make it in the music business. The Monkees' songs were catchy and fun, and the show was a huge hit with teenagers. The Monkees' biggest hit, "I'm a Believer," was a number-one hit in the United States in 1967. However, the band's success was short-lived. The Monkees broke up in 1971, and the members went their separate ways.

5. Milli Vanilli

Milli Vanilli was a German pop duo that was popular in the late 1980s. The duo was known for its catchy pop songs and its flamboyant stage presence. Milli Vanilli's biggest hit, "Girl You Know It's True," was a number-one hit in the United States in 1989. However, the duo's success was short-lived. It was revealed that Milli Vanilli had not actually sung on any of their songs. The duo was stripped of their Grammy Award, and they broke up in 1990.

These are just a few of the many musicians that time has mercifully forgotten. These artists may not have had the staying power of the Beatles or the Rolling Stones, but they all had their moments in the sun. So next time you're feeling nostalgic for the good old days, remember these forgotten musicians and smile. They may not have been the greatest, but they were still a part of our musical history.
